B- Arrests

Federal

LORENZO LAMPASI, JR., a "button" in the JOSEPH COLOMBO "family", was indicted by a Federal Grand Jury (FGJ), Southern District of New York (SDNY), and charged with violation of Title 18, Section 1010, United States Code (USC), for making false statements in a credit application for property improvement loan under FHA program. Bench warrant issued 3/2/67, and LAMPASI was arrested by Bureau Agents 3/3/67, and released on $1500 bail.

NICHOLAS FORLANO, "caporegima" in COLOMBO "family, was arrested by Internal Revenue Service (IRS) on 3/13/67, for not having a tax stamp.

As a result of information furnished by [redacted]

In the course of an investigation captioned, [redacted] aka: [redacted] (LNU) - FUGITIVE; [redacted] - VICTIM, AR", Bufile 92-9333, NY file 92-4320, an indictment was returned in the SDNY on 3/23/67, charging subjects with a three count indictment for violation of Section 1951, Title 18, USC, in that they interfered with commerce by extortion, threats or violence. [redacted] a member of the GAMBINO "family" of LCN. [redacted] b6 b7C b7D

The violation specifically [redacted] acts of extortion these individuals committed in the Spring and Summer of 1963 when they attempted to take over the Roundabout Club in New Rochelle, NY. The Roundabout Club, now defunct, was a night club which sold both food and alcoholic beverages.

Investigation by the New York Office substantiated the fact that actual threats of violence against the victim's person and property had been made by [redacted] and his associates, including assaults on the victim as well as other employees of the Roundabout Club. b6 b7C

The importance of the indictment is best demonstrated by the fact that it has established a precedent in the investigation and prosecution of LCN members who have been known to take over night clubs and restaurants in the past through use of similar methods. The application of the Hobbs Act in this matter showing that the acts of the LCN members caused a decline in the business of certain night clubs and restaurants, it is felt can be utilized in numerous situations in the New York area.

MAFIA FAMILIES ACTIVE IN CANADA

Narcotics Shipped Here by Bonanno's Group—Other Interests Include Pizza

Following is the second of two articles on Mafia activities.

By CHARLES GRUTZNER

The 385-mile paved highway between Montreal and New York City constitutes one of the principal narcotics traffic routes on this continent. At each end of the trail, law-enforcement agents say, are members and associates of the Mafia family headed by Joseph (Joe Bananas) Bonanno.

The agents report that millions of dollars in illicit drugs from European and Mediterranean seaports and airports are smuggled annually into Canada's great port city for overland transit to New York. Some of it goes to sustain the habits of this city's addicts, estimated to number 60,000; some is sent to other parts of the United States.

A large amount of heroin is carried by Mafia couriers in private cars, difficult to spot in the heavy traffic that flows across the open border.

Despite these difficulties, Federal narcotics agents have made many seizures. They have found heroin in hollowed-out armrests and custom-built concealed compartments in cars or taped to automobile underbodies. A Mexican diplomat and a Uruguayan Government emplo[ye]

Montreal-to-New York Roads a Majo

BONANNO FAMILY ACTIVE IN CANADA

Pizza, Alcohol and Betting Among the Interests of Underworld Groups

who preferred the comfort of the Montreal-New York train to a long auto ride, were sentenced in 1964 to prison terms of 18 years and 10 years as smugglers of $13.5-million in heroin, which the Federal Bureau of Narcotics said was for distribution here by the Mafia.

With more than six million United States visitors expected in Montreal within the next six months for the recently opened Expo 67, United States and Canadian authorities have stepped up their investigations of Mafia connections on both sides of the border.

The following report on some of those connections has been pieced together by examination of police records and interviews with dozens of Government officials, state or provincial prosecutors, local police officers and detectives and other knowledgeable persons in both countries.

The Bonanno underworld clan has no monopoly on the narcotics traffic across the Canadian border. The Senate Permanent Committee on Investigations has compiled a fat list of narcotics convictions of members of all five of the Mafia families, or gangs, that radiate outward from New York.

The biggest share of the drug traffic was handled for years by the family headed by Vito Genovese, who was finally brought to book in 1959 and is now serving a 15-year prison term for narcotics conspiracy. According to Federal investigators, Thomas (Tommy Ryan) Eboli is managing various enterprises of the family in the absence of its titular leader.

Narcotics Traffickers Listed

Other Mafia families in the New York metropolitan area that have been involved in the narcotics traffic are those headed by Carlo (Don Carlo) Gambino, Thomas (Three Finger Brown) Luchese and Joseph Colombo. The Government also has a list of narcotics traffickers in the family of Stefano Magaddino, whose territory extends from western New York into the Ohio Valley, with outposts in Canada. A Mafia family is a group of individuals who are not necessarily blood relatives.

The police in both countries are focusing investigations upon the Bonanno and Magaddino families because of the recent power struggle in the Bonanno family. Magaddino, a member of the Mafia's national council, was more than an onlooker in that struggle. Investigators say he was responsible for the choice of Gaspare DiGregorio, to whom he is related by marriage, to replace Bonanno as family leader after the latter was kidnapped at gunpoint on a New York street on Oct. 21, 1964.

The 62-year-old Bonanno recently returned to power in a revolt against DiGregorio led by his son Salvatore (Bill) Bonanno.

The investigations into the Canadian colonies of the Bonanno and Magaddino families have provided a new insight into international illegal activities. Magaddino's Canadian affiliations are reported strongest in the Toronto area. A secondary narcotics route is from Toronto to Buffalo and Rochester. Magaddino has interests also in Winnipeg.

Dominate Pizza Trade

Montreal police dossiers mention Mafia involvement "in many criminal arsons, the protection racket, untaxed alcohol and fraudulent bankruptcies." The Mafia is said to dominate the pizza trade in Montreal's large Italian community through controlling prices of cheese specialties. An established creamery, in which Bonanno tried without success to invest, was heavily damaged by fire sometime later.

Mafia associates in Montreal reportedly operate a gigantic betting lay-off center where United States bookmakers unload their excess play when they get an unbalanced amount of wagers on any one horse in a race. In addition to its obvious rackets, the Mafia is reported to have infiltrated several legitimate businesses in Canada.

Although organized crime has received special attention in Montreal recently as part of the drive to clean up before the influx of visitors to Expo 67 reaches full swing, the situation is not limited to Canada's largest city.

The Ontario Police Commission, in its annual report last month, stated that underworld infiltration of legitimate businesses in Toronto and some other cities "follows a trend similar to that which has been encountered in many of the larger cities of the United States."

Regarded as Successor

The investigations in Montreal, where the Bonanno family has had strong ties for several decades, have gone into some of the dealings of Luigi Greco, generally regarded as the imprisoned Carmine Galante's successor as underboss for Bonanno interests in Canada.

They also are looking into the activities of Vincenzo (Vic) Cotroni, who has a $1-million libel suit pending against a Canadian magazine, which described him as a Mafia associate; a mysterious money man referred to only by his initials, and the Violi brothers, who were spared deportation to Italy when the Supreme Court of Canada ruled that the Immigration Minister had waited too long in ordering their expulsion as convicted criminals.

Bonanno sought Canadian citizenship only three months before he was kidnapped in New York. His Canadian lawyer, Raymond Daoust, told an immigration hearing that his client "loves this country" [Canada] and wanted to participate actively in its business life. He said Bonanno had an interest in three Canadian companies, G. Saputo & Sons, Cremerie Stella and Cremerie Costenza, all makers of Italian cheese specialties.

Ran Garment Factory

Bonanno's petition for immigrant status was denied on the ground that he had sworn falsely that he had never been convicted. Bonanno had been convicted in New York for violation of the Federal Wages and Hours Law. He was then running laundries and a garment factory.

The labor-law violation was the only conviction on the record of the man who has been named before several Senate committees as the head of illegal enterprises from coast to coast. But it was enough to bring about his expulsion from Canada in 1964. At the deportation hearing, Bonanno's lawyer said the allegation that his client was a Mafioso was "a vicious rumor."

Bonanno, a native of Castellammare del Golfo in Sicily, was 19 years old when he entered the United States illegally from Havana in 1924. He left this country briefly in 1938 and returned legally from Canada to Detroit in 1938, clearing the way for his subsequent naturalization. He became an American citizen in 1945.

More recently, what has come to be known as "the Banana Expedition" gave the police information on the Bonanno family's New York-Montreal axis. It also raised questions to which no sure answer has been found after five months of investigation by the Canadian police and by a Federal grand jury in New York and a Brooklyn grand jury.

Loaded Revolvers Found

The expedition came to light after two patrol constables closed in on a parked car in a Montreal street on the night of last Nov. 28 and arrested its three occupants when they found three loaded .32-caliber revolvers on the seats. They remained at the scene until the arrival of a second car. The constables found a sports-events starting pistol under a seat of the second car and arrested the car's four occupants.

The catch turned out to be six Bonanno men and Louis Greco, identified by Canadian authorities as the Montreal underworld leader. Chief of the expedition from New York was Joe Bonanno's son Salvatore. The others were Vito DeFilippo and his son Patrick, both of the Bronx; Carlo (Buddy) Simaro, who gave a New Brunswick, N.J., address and is said to be Joseph Bonanno's bodyguard; Peter Notaro of the Bronx, and Peter Joseph Magaddino, who gave a Brooklyn address.

According to the New York police, Peter Magaddino had been a member of the Buffalo Magaddino family but had a falling out with his cousin Stefano. The police questioned all seven, including Greco, about narcotics traffic, smuggling of immigrants across the border, gambling and the protection racket of which pizza the kidnapping of Joseph Bonanno, which is still under investigation.

The F.B.I. and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police finally traced the elder Asaro to Vincenzo Cotroni's home in the Montreal suburb of Repentigny last June. Armed with search warrants, a 13-man police force entered the house, where they found the fugitive robber and parole violator in the company of two of the Cotroni brothers, Vincenzo and Frank.

Vincenzo allegedly offered Sgt. Gerard Barbeau a $25,000 bribe to make the arrest elsewhere than in his home, and increased the offer to $50,000 when the officer refused. He was arrested on a bribery charge and is free in $25,000 bail awaiting trial.

Tunnel to Bank Found

Frank Cotroni was arrested in March of this year and charged, along with seven others, with conspiracy to rob the Decarie Boulevard City and District Savings Bank. The men were seized after the police had found a 53-foot tunnel dug from a nearby home to the bank's vault. A witness testified that he had overheard the alleged plotters say that one of the 1,500 safety-deposit boxes in the vault contained "an assured $1-million in cash."

There has been a plague of bank robberies in the Montreal area in recent years, most of them the work of the local Mafia, according to the police.

The third Cotroni brother, Giuseppe (Peppe), is in prison, where he was sent for a 15-year term some years ago for narcotics traffic and receiving stolen bonds. Jean Paul Ste. Marie, a former Crown prosecutor who was responsible for Giuseppe's conviction, became Vincenzo Cotroni's lawyer after leaving public office and filed the $1-million libel suit against Maclean's magazine.

The Violi brothers, Rocco and Giuseppe, operate at a lower level and are known to the Canadian police as "enforcers" and strong-arm men. They are members of a large blood-relationship family, some of whose components have been deported to Italy. One of the Violis, Paolo, had been charged with complicity in the murder of Natale Brigante and returned to Italy where he has been classified by Interpol, the international police organization, as a dangerous criminal.

Deportation Was Delayed

Rocco and Giuseppe Violi, twins, had entered Canada from Italy as immigrants in 1959 but were ordered deported in 1961 and 1962 for criminal offenses. The Immigration Minister failed to enforce the deportation order until 1964 when they were picked up in Montreal and placed in jail. In voiding the deportation, the Supreme Court ruled that the Immigration Minister did not have the right, after allowing a court-ordered deportee to remain in Canada, to change his mind later and enforce the order.

These are the principal figures whose clouded status the police are trying to pinpoint. The Canadian police are chary about using the word Mafia. For one thing, there has never been anything in Canada comparable to the Senate Permanent Investigations (McClellan) Committee, which made a public record of underworld figures identified as Mafia members. The Canadian rules against disclosing police information outside the courtroom are stricter than in the United States.

Although Greco had been regarded by the police as the leader of the underworld in Montreal, a high Canadian police official said recently: "Greco is

Informer and the Law

Making a Deal With a Cooperative Defendant May Have Wide Benefits

By SIDNEY E. ZION

The man who turns state's evidence has never been a popular figure.

He is vilified as a "rat fink stool pigeon" by his former friends, shunned by the society he has aided and ridiculed privately by the prosecutor who uses his testimony. Still, he usually gets his day in the sun, the "last laugh" day. This is when a grateful district attorney asks a judge about to pass sentence to take into consideration the informer's cooperation and deal with him gently, though the informer, too, is guilty of the crime for which he has testified against his ex-colleagues.

News Analysis

Among the recent beneficiaries of this ritual were the four men whose testimony in March convicted John (Sonny) Franzese, the reputed Mafia leader, and his accomplices for masterminding a series of nationwide bank robberies.

In return for their testimony —"without it we couldn't have gotten a conviction," Judge Jacob Mishler said—the men, who had pleaded guilty to holding up the banks were given light sentences in Brooklyn Federal Court. One of them, the getaway driver, walked out with a suspended sentence.

Franzese, on the other hand, was given a sentence that could keep him behind bars for 50 years. The same could have been meted out to the informers, but instead the three who got jail terms will probably be out within two years.

Guilty Pleas Are Dominant

Because the informers had histories of violence—one said during the trial that he would have killed without hesitation anyone who tried to interfere with a holdup—the case served to underscore one of the many problems connected with sentencing informers and others who plead guilty.

That the problems are wide-ranging and often complex seems clear from the fact that most defendants plead guilty, in some jurisdictions as many as 95 per cent.

Obviously, few defendants are interested in giving up their rights to a trial without some concessions, whether or not they are giving up other people, and even though most of them know that the prosecutor has enough evidence against them to get a conviction.

Obviously, too, the concession price is commensurate with the bargaining position of the defendant.

The Government had for years been trying to get a conviction against Franzese, so it was no surprise that the men who made it possible were treated better than would ordinarily have been the case.

Indeed, Michael Gillen, the assistant United States attorney, asked for the immediate release of all the informers. The fact that this request was not fully granted indicates some important features of the plea-bargaining system.

First, the fact that the judge has the responsibility for sentencing places him in a position different from the prosecutor. If he turns a dangerous man loose, and the man commits another violent crime, the judge will shoulder the burden and the public abuse. It doesn't help much to answer that the man had cooperated with the Government.

Informer's Testimony

Moreover, in many cases it is not clear that the man the informer convicted by his testimony is worse than the informer. A conscientious judge will not perfunctorily accept the Government's value judgment.

Prosecutors contend however, that unless they can legitimately tell an informer that things will go easier for him, he will not talk and, as a result, criminal conspiracies will flourish.

Last month, the American Bar Association's advisory committee on the criminal trial, in a tentative draft of standards to guide judges and prosecutors in sentencing persons who plead guilty, generally approved the "practice of granting concessions in exchange for cooperation."

While many district attorneys will not guarantee a witness a deal, it is no secret that many promises are made, sometimes explicitly, more often implicitly.

"I take good care of my informants," a prosecutor from a larger Eastern city said the other day. "I pick a judge who I know cooperates with our office and I can tell the informer exactly what he's going to get."

Federal Cooperation

"If the guy has a Federal rap hanging I try to work a sentence out with the U. S. Attorney's office and while the Feds tend to be moralistic about these things they will go along if the informer is important enough."

The prosecutor, who did not want his name or state to be mentioned, said there were "plenty" of things other than sentencing that could be done for informers.

"For starters," he said, "take the guy who asked me to get him a dentist who would fill his teeth in jail. In our state they don't bother to fill your teeth, the jailhouse dentists; they just pull 'em out. So I got the guy a dentist."

The prosecutor said that he "often" arranged for informers to go to a prison of their choice, an important consideration since the prisons vary greatly in most states and in the Federal system.

"I even worked it for one prisoner to stay where he was," the prosecutor said. "It wasn't much of a place, but they wanted to move him and he didn't want to go because he was near his mother who used to bring him candy all the time."

Associated Press

John (Sonny) Franzese was convicted with aid by informers in bank robberies.

Few prosecutors will concede that prison deals are worked out, except where the informer's life would be in danger in a certain place.

Thus, in the Franzese case, the informers said they feared being sent to the Danbury, Conn., penitentiary and the judge assured them at sentencing they would not go there.

Actually, Danbury is considered a country club by criminals since it is a minimum-security prison. The easiest way to be sent to Danbury, a Federal prison, seems to be to commit a white-collar crime, such as stock fraud, and plead guilty to one count of a multicount indictment.

This assures a short sentence. The determination as to the place of incarceration often depends both on the length of the sentence and the kind of crime committed.

Criminals who have taken part in violent crimes are not sent to minimum-security prisons, unless they are informers, in which case they are placed in maximum-security cells. For example, Joe Valachi, who testified about the Cosa Nostra, is in the Milan, Mich., penitentiary, one of the model Federal institutions, but is under heavy guard.

For the average defendant, however, it is more important that he know how long he will have to serve if he pleads guilty rather than where he will do his time.

As to this, the American Bar Association committee recommended that the "prevalant" system of plea negotiation, which is now a rather sub rosa affair, be made formal under a set of guidelines that take into account such things as a defendant's willingness to assume responsibility for his conduct and the fact that his plea has "avoided delay in the disposition of other cases."

The committee's citing of delays demonstrates the underlying need for plea negotiation: Most courts would simply be overcome with cases if every prosecutor and judge held fast to the idea that a crime is a crime, that no one has a right to bargain with the state's interest in punishing each and every violation of the criminal code.

Bonanno Regains Power in Mafia Gang

Following is the first of two articles on recent changes in the internal organization of the Mafia.

By CHARLES GRUTZNER

Joseph (Joe Bananas) Bonanno has returned to a position of influence and profit in the Mafia gang from whose leadership he was forced at gunpoint two and a half years ago, according to local and Federal law-enforcement officers.

They say that the 62-year-old underworld chieftain's comeback was maneuvered by his eldest son and heir apparent, 34-year-old Salvatore, sometimes called Bill.

Salvatore escaped from a fusillade of bullets in Brooklyn early last year after challenging the authority of Gaspare DiGregorio, who had supplanted the elder Bonanno as leader of the gang, or family, with the approval of the Mafia's 12-member national commission. That shooting began a sequence of events that led to Joseph Bonanno's recent restoration.

The story of those events and their meaning has been pieced together through weeks of investigation by The New York Times in this country and in Canada, where police records have been examined and dozens of Government officials, state or provincial prosecutors, local police officers and detectives and other knowledgeable persons have been interviewed.

The transition has taken place against a background of shifting allegiances that turned cousin against cousin, godfather against godson; a plague of heart attacks that killed one interregnum caretaker and inactivated several adversaries; international underworld intrigue; financial lures, and vengeful passions in the gang of more than 250 members.

Law-enforcement officers say that they have confirmed Bonanno's emergence from exile through underworld informers, around-the-clock surveillance of key Mafiosi and the observation of such changes as new "street men" taking bets for bookmakers or handling collections for loan sharks in scattered areas.

A return to power of a banished leader is rare in the Mafia. A Federal official described it as less in the nature of a coup than an attempt to ease a potentially explosive situation. He expressed the belief that the Mafia national commission had acquiesced to Bonanno's restoration because DiGregorio had proved unable to control the varied rackets in the far-flung family empire.

Precise information is lacking about the new ranking order and on how the income from the rackets is divided. Inspector Louis C. Cottell, the head of the Police Department's Central Investigating Bureau, said in an interview:

"The situation has not jelled fully. We fit together pieces of information and get a general picture, but you must remember that the Mafia does not publish annual reports nor does it announce its personnel promotions and departures in the business-news pages of The New York Times."

The elements in the present situation are still volatile and other changes may follow, according to investigators. They do not rule out the possibility of further gunplay. There is bad blood between Bonanno and Stefano Magaddino, the leader of a Mafia family whose domain extends from western New York into the Ohio Valley and Canada. Magaddino, a member of the national commission, sponsored DeGregorio as Bonanno's successor.

Entered U. S. Illegally

Joseph Bonanno, a native of Castellammare del Golfo in Sicily, was 19 years old when he entered this country illegally from Havana in 1924. He went into the laundry business, the nonunion garment industry and became a partner in a funeral parlor in Brooklyn, where he took the first steps along the path investigators say has made him a millionaire on the profits of a variety of rackets and legitimate businesses, in which he later invested some of his illegal gains.

The only conviction on his record is for violation of the Federal Wages and Hours Law, despite arrests on many charges, including running machine guns to the Al Capone mob in Chicago.

After leaving this country briefly in 1938, Bonanno made a legal re-entry from Canada to Detroit. He became a naturalized citizen in 1945. For some years thereafter, he conducted his mushrooming enterprises almost anonymously behind a screen of high-priced lawyers and protective henchmen. He was thrust into national notoriety in 1957 when he was among 63 alleged leaders of organized crime gathered from all over the country at a conference in Apalachin, N. Y.

Spared by Heart Attack

A heart attack spared Bonanno from a conspiracy trial in which many of his Apalachin confrères were convicted. By the time Bonanno had recovered, the convictions of the others had been reversed by the United States Court of Appeals and the indictment against him was dismissed.

The conspiracy conviction against the 20 men who attended the 1957 meeting at Apalachin in 1957 was reversed Nov. 28, 1960, by the three-man United States Court of Appeals in a unanimous decision holding that the Government's evidence was insufficient to prove that the alleged conspirators had entered into an agreement to lie to investigators about the purpose of their meeting.

Bonanno's reputed leadership of a Mafia family became a matter of public record in a chart prepared by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the New York police and presented at hearings of the Senate permanent investigations subcommittee.

Bonanno was named in testimony before Senate investigating committees as a mastermind of the underworld and the head of one of the five Mafia families centered in the New York metropolitan area. Members of a Mafia group known as a family are not necessarily blood relatives. The other four families, according to the police and the F.B.I., are those headed by Vito Genovese, now in prison under a 20-year sentence for narcotics conspiracy; Carlo Gambino, Thomas (Three Finger's Brown) Luchese and Joseph Colombo.

Bonanno's financial interests reputedly extend from coast to coast. He has a home in Tucson, Ariz., where he has extensive real estate holdings, dairy interests in Wisconsin, investments in Canada and allegedly a share of the legal gambling in Haiti.

Bonanno has been spending most of his time recently in the New York area, where he frequently stays with his son at 1555 Tyler Street, East Meadow, L.I.

Chosen as Successor

Unlike the nattily dressed, jaunty Bonanno, DiGregorio was little known, even within the Mafia, when, according to law-enforcement men, he was chosen as Bonanno's successor. They say that this took place at a "sitdown" of metropolitan area bosses and consiglieri (counselors) in the Capri restaurant in Cedarhurst, L. I., in January, 1965, with Bonanno absent.

DiGregorio's best recommendations for the job were reportedly that he was sponsored by the powerful Magaddino, to whom he was related by marriage, and the fact that he was a "sleeper"—a man never convicted of a crime and who could pass unnoticed in any gathering.

DiGregorio is 62, the same age as Joseph Bonanno. He was born in Castellammare Trapani, within five miles of Bonanno's childhood home.

DiGregorio had been arrested in Brooklyn in 1934 on a charge of homicide with a gun, but the case was dismissed in court. He lives on a modest scale in West Babylon, L. I., and has a garment factory in Brooklyn.

The affairs of the Bonanno-DiGregorio family are under wider and more intensive investigation than those of any other Mafia group. An army of investigators is trying to learn how much of the take from which enterprises is going to Joseph Bonanno, to Salvatore Bonanno and to DiGregorio.

Under the Mafia franchise system, the boss of each family gets a cut of the profits of all enterprises in which his followers are engaged, according to law-enforcement agencies.

The head of a sports betting book or policy bank, the loan shark, the smuggler of untaxed cigarettes, the garbage disposal racketeer or the entrepreneur who has just brought in a narcotics shipment from Canada or Europe sends his tribute through channels to the family boss, even though the two may never have direct contact.

This insulation of the boss from direct contact with the criminals who actually handle the rackets is one of the factors that makes the conviction of the top men difficult even when underlings are caught red-handed.

Another is the silence of Mafia members. Federal and Kings County grand juries are currently questioning members of both the Bonanno and DiGregorio factions, several of whom have been sent to jail for refusing to give responsive answers after having been offered immunity from prosecution. However, a few members have been talking behind closed doors of grand jury rooms.

Affairs Under Scrutiny

Separate but coordinated inquiries are being pressed by the F.B.I. and the staffs of United States Attorney General Robert M. Morgenthau and Brooklyn District Attorney Aaron E. Koota. The affairs of individual members of the gang are under scrutiny by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, the Internal Revenue Service, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The concentration of official attention to the affairs of the Bonanno family in the metropolitan area reportedly has led its leaders to move some interests to new locations and strengthen enterprises they already have in distant places.

"As the pressure of investigations gets heavier upon them here and they cannot meet and operate so freely, they look for other places," said Mr. Morgenthau in an interview.

Vito De Filippo, a top lieutenant who has remained loyal to Bonanno, has a contract with the Haitian Government for the gambling, bar and restaurant rights in the International Casino at Port-au-Prince. Federal investigators believe De Filippo is acting as Bonanno's front in the West Indies.

IN JAIL: Vito Genovese, head of another Mafia family, is serving a 20-year jail sentence on charges of narcotics conspiracy.

A Trip to Montreal

In Canada also, police interest has focused on the Bonanno family. Two Montreal police officers visited New York recently to obtain information from Federal and local officials. One item of Canadian concern was a trip by Salvatore Bonanno and five associates to Montreal, where they were arrested in the company of Luigi Greco, a leader of the Montreal underworld.

The New Yorkers, in whose two cars constables found several loaded revolvers, were expelled from Canada. Although the incident took place five months ago, the police are still trying to plumb its significance.

They believe the expedition to Canada's largest city where the Bonanno family has long had strong ties in the large Italian community, may have been a move in Bonanno's campaign to consolidate his strength for a return to power here.

The elder Bonanno's fall from power within the Mafia came abruptly on Oct. 21, 1964, as he and his lawyer, William Power Maloney, were bidding each other good night in front of Mr. Maloney's Park Avenue home.

Two men shoved Bonanno into a car and drove off. Mr. Maloney told the police later that one of the kidnappers had said, "Come on, Joe. My boss wants to see you," and had fired a shot at him (Maloney) when he sought to run to the car.

Officials believed at first it was a fake kidnapping to enable Bonanno to avoid a scheduled appearance before a Federal grand jury. The F.B.I. believed, on the basis of later information, that the kidnapping was real and had been ordered by the Mafia high council because Bonanno had supposedly plotted to have Gambino and Luchese killed so he could take over some of their rackets.

Authorities now believe that Bonanno was turned loose a few days later, after his captors had exacted his promise to surrender his own leadership. But Bonanno remained in hiding for 18 months until he walked into the Federal Courthouse on Foley Square on May 17, 1966, and gave himself up. He is under $150,000 bail, awaiting trial for conspiracy to obstruct justice in having wilfully failed to appear before the grand jury.

Brother-in-Law Named

When he was forced to abdicate, Bonanno is reported to have named a brother-in-law, Frank LaBruzzo, as his successor, and his son Salvatore as consigliere. Some Mafiosi complained that this merely set up a facade behind which the elder Bonanno would continue to run things.

After less than a month as titular boss, LaBruzzo died of a heart attack. At the Cedarhurst "sitdown" where DiGregorio was chosen leader, the blessing of the national commission of 12 top bosses reportedly was bestowed on the new leader by Sam (Momo) Giancana, who came from Chicago for the occasion.

DiGregorio's elevation created new enmities. He had been best man at Joseph Bonanno's wedding and was godfather to Salvatore. The Bonanno loyalists, who now called DiGregorio a traitor, complained that his sponsorship by Magaddino, a relative by marriage, was the same sort of nepotism that had been charged against Bonanno.

Once Bonanno's Chauffeur

DiGregorio suffered a heart attack a few months after he became boss. Investigators say he chose two overseers, Sereno Tartamella, the secretary of an unaffiliated union of hairdressers, and cosmetologists, and Nicholas (Nick the Butler) Marangello, a former Brooklyn saloonkeeper, whose chief claim to recognition was that he had been Joe Bonanno's chauffeur.

Neither of the overseers chosen by DiGregorio had the stature to command obeisance of the rank and file. Some of the lesser racketeers stopped sending in money. Some offered to support with guns and money any revolt Salvatore Bonanno might lead. At least one captain, who ran bookmaking and loan sharking in the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn, joined the Colombo family.

The storm broke with gunfire on Friday night, Jan. 28, 1966. The quiet of Troutman Street in the rundown Ridgewood section of Brooklyn was shattered by more than 20 shots. By the time the police arrived, seven guns were found lying in the street, but the combatants had fled, leaving neither dead nor wounded, only a few bullet nicks in two of the old frame tenements.

'Sitdown' in Home

As the police reconstructed the happening some time later, Salvatore had held a "sitdown" in a granduncle's home with some followers to assess his strength. The DiGregorio faction had got wind of the meeting and made a sortie in several cars. Salvatore Bonanno reportedly escaped by breaking into another house, running through a ground-floor flat and climbing over a backyard fence.

The police theorized that the invaders had sought to kill Salvatore or else scare him into abandoning the role of pretender to the throne. The latter seemed the more likely, in view of the fact that none of the bullets had found a human mark.

An investigation of the incident, launched by Mr. Koota, quickly expanded into a full-scale inquiry into the whole Bonanno empire. Assistant District Attorney Irving T. Seidman brought witness after witness from both the Bonanno and DiGregorio camps before the grand jury. Most of them refused to give a responsive answer, even after being offered immunity.

Among those who went to jail for 30 days rather than break the Mafia code of silence was Salvatore Bonanno. This was his second trip to jail for contempt. The first had been for his refusal to give information to a Federal grand jury investigating his father's disappearance.

Whereabouts a Mystery

All this while, Joseph Bonanno's whereabouts remained a mystery to all but his close associates. He was reported as hiding out in Canada and as having been seen in his native Sicily, in Rome, in Mexico, in Haiti and in other distant places. After his public reappearance here last May, the power struggle was escalated.

The nervousness of the members of the competing factions is indicated by an incident on June 1. A nurse in University Hospital was tidying up the private room of Angelo (Little Moe) Presenzano, a DiGregorio henchman, who was there for surgery. She found in his night table a loaded .38-caliber revolver, protection he evidently felt he needed inside a hospital. The police identified it as one of 71 stolen from a West Side railroad siding.

Presenzano had been indicted for first-degree murder in 1949, along with two other members of the Bonanno mob, in the killing of an East Side hoodlum who had held up a floating crap game and made off with $17,000 of the players' money. Although that charge was dismissed in court, Presenzano had an earlier conviction on his record, for robbery back in 1928. That made him a second offender upon his conviction for possession of the revolver and he was sent to prison for 10 years.

Court-Directed Acquittal

The shooting last July of a hoodlum named Frank Mari in the Bay Ridge section was initially regarded as so insignificant that it was not even reported in the newspapers. But it developed that Mari was a member of the Bonanno family who had accepted DiGregorio as the new leader. He had won a court-directed acquittal four years earlier in a narcotics smuggling case in which John (Big John) Ormento and 12 others were found guilty.

The shooting of Mari, seen as a reprisal against the DiGregorio faction for its Troutman Street sortie a few months earlier, led other members of the mob to shift their allegiance from DiGregorio to Bonanno, according to information gleaned from police informers.

Bonanno, who had been living the life of a millionaire in Tucson before his kidnapping, has in recent months spent most of his time in Salvatore's home at East Meadow, L.I., directing strategy.

II. UTILIZATION OF TOP ECHELON CRIMINAL INFORMANTS

During the month of April, 1967, there were [redacted] top echelon criminal informants being actively handled under this program. b7D

As of April 30, 1967, the New York Office was handling a total of [redacted] under the TECIP.

III. IDENTIFICATION OF "LA COSA NOSTRA" MEMBERS

COLOMBO "FAMILY"

New York is origin in 78 cases of LCN subjects who have been identified as members of the COLOMBO "family".

DI GREGORIO (FORMERLY BONANNO) "FAMILY"

New York is origin in 72 cases of LCN subjects who have been identified as members of the DI GREGORIO "family". These 72 cases include two known members residing in Canada, as well as two known members residing in Italy.

Considerable information has been developed regarding the struggle for leadership of the DI GREGORIO (formerly BONANNO) "family". No definite or conclusive information has been obtained to identify one man as "boss". However, several sources have advised that GASPARE DI GREGORIO has either stepped down from the leadership, or at least has become almost wholly inactive. Those named by different sources as running the "family" are JOSEPH ZICARELLI and PAUL SCIACCA; however, this has been indicated to be an interim authority, as neither has been reliably identified as "boss". Further, there is repeated information from various sources that JOSEPH BONANNO himself, will regain his former position as "boss", or will control the selection of the "boss", as someone who would be controlled by him. NYO is continuing attempts to determine any definite appointment of "boss" in this "family".

GAMBINO "FAMILY"

New York is origin in 173 cases of LCN subjects who have been identified as members of the GAMBINO "family".

GENOVESE "FAMILY"

New York is origin in 141 cases of LCN subjects who have been identified as members of the GENOVESE "family" of LCN.

[redacted] b7D

JOSEPH DE NIGRIS has been deleted from this "family" in view of his death in February, 1967.

LUCHESE "FAMILY"

New York is origin in 45 cases of LCN subjects who have been identified as members of the LUCHESE "family".

1. The Status of Subject in LCN, and Related Information Regarding the Leadership of the DI GREGORIO "family", (formerly BONANNO "family")

Set forth below is information received from various sources relative to the activity within and outside the DI GREGORIO "family", to determine the leadership of the "family".

On October 24, 1966, NY T-5 advised as follows:

Informant advised [redacted] b7D

DI GREGORIO was close to the "man from Buffalo", and an extremely wealthy individual in his own right. He was made "Boss" of the BONANNO "family", however, it is the informant's opinion that DI GREGORIO never actually wanted this title. The informant reasons that DI GREGORIO has a great deal of money and to be made "Boss" of this "hungry" "family" will not enhance his financial position, and might well cost him money to buy favors, etcetera, from influential "family" members. Some members of this "family" have gone along with the appointment of DI GREGORIO, however, many "family" members are still extremely loyal to BONANNO. It is apparent now that BONANNO does not intend to go along with the decision of the "Commission" and intends to fight for his rightful position as "Boss" of this "family". It is also the opinion of the informant that the "Commission" is not interested in starting a war because they are afraid of the notoriety, and they know that if they take any direct action against BONANNO, they might well have a war on their hands. Informant noted [redacted]

BONANNO is currently involved in a war of nerves with the "Commission", and it is possible that a full-scale war might break out at any time. LCN members have been cautioned by close friends to stay away from members of the BONANNO "family", rather than take the chance of aligning themselves with one faction or the other.

It is noted that the "man from Buffalo" is possibly identical with STEVE MAGADDINO, Buffalo LCN "Boss", to whom the subject is related by marriage.

Investigation conducted by the Chicago Division of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to identify anyone known as [redacted] (phoenetic) was negative. A review of the files of the Newark Office of the FBI failed to reflect any information identifiable with [redacted] (phoenetic).

It is noted that SCIACCA lives in Massapequa, Long Island.

The following information is being furnished to below listed offices, to assist in interviews of informants and sources of your offices, regarding the triple gangland slaying of subject and two others at Queens, New York, on 11/10/67.

Subject, born 8/9/14, Brooklyn, NY, was a "caporegima" in the JOSEPH BONANNO "family" of LCN. He was also engaged in the operation of gambling and shylocking activities in the Ridgewood and Williamsburg sections of Queens and Brooklyn, N.Y. His legitimate businesses included a button hole factory for garment manufacturers, and a wholesale beverage business. After the BONANNO "family" broke into two factions (BONANNO and DI GREGORIO) in 1964-65, subject avoided openly taking sides for as long as he could, and in mid-1967, appeared to have joined the DI GREGORIO faction. NYCPD information indicates he may have been appointed as "consiglieri" of the DI GREGORIO faction, which is now believed to be led by PAUL SCIACCA, who was "consiglieri" under DI GREGORIO. Information has been developed from several sources to the effect that the above split recently became permanent, and that those aligned with JOSEPH BONANNO were now outcasts from LCN. Numerous sources during the past year have advised of potential gang warfare over the above split.

7. ACTION BY REGULATORY AUTHORITIES

[redacted] b6 b7C b7D

On 12/18/67, Assistant District Attorney IRVING P. SEIDMAN advised that seven members of the former BONANNO "family" of LCN were indicted on two counts of contempt of court. Included in the group is SALVATORE VINCENT BONANNO. No action is being taken on the indictments at this time pending rendition of a decision by the New York Court of Appeals on a parallel case in which a point of law has been raised on the question of double jeopardy, viz, whether such jeopardy arises where one serves a sentence for court contempt in failing to testify before a duly constituted Grand Jury and is thereafter indicted for criminal contempt on the same refusal. Argument on the contentions involved is scheduled for February, 1968.

Cops Nab 3, Tell of Solid Gun Cadillac

By EDWARD KIRKMAN

A suspected defector from the Joe Bananas 'family' of Cosa Nostra and two companions were held in $10,000 bail each in Criminal Court yesterday on charges that they had been riding around the lower East Side with loaded .38-caliber pistols.

Sgt. Robert O'Neill of the Police Department's Criminal Investigation Bureau and three detectives spotted the three Wednesday afternoon as they emerged from the Parkview bar at 124 Forsyth St.

The Cops Stop Them—

The cops, who work under Inspector Louis Cottel of the investigation bureau, tailed the three who were riding in a 1968 gray Cadillac. When they allegedly went through a red light at Delancey St. and the Bowery, the cops pulled them over.

According to police, the driver, Frank Mari, 41, of 3 Hillside Drive, Searingtown, L.I., had a loaded .38 on the seat beside him.

The other two, James F. Episcopia, 40, of 174 Elizabeth St., and Kenneth Lazinsky, 26, of 360 Madison St., were toting .38s in holsters, police said. The detectives said they also found 21 rounds of ammunition in the car and $3,617 in the men's possession.

Mob Link Is Charged

According to police, Mari, also known as "Frankie T," formerly was an underling in the Bananas mob, but shifted to the faction of Cosmo DiGregorio.

In the summer of 1966, police also reported, Mari was shot in Brooklyn and later disappeared from a hospital. More recently, three associates were slain in a Brooklyn restaurant, and detectives said Mari may have been armed to defend himself against his enemies.

Nassau Jury Queries 25 Top Hoods

By Tom Renner

Mineola—More than 25 top Cosa Nostra figures, including a Long Island crime executive whose identity was unknown until recently, appeared yesterday before Nassau County's newest organized crime grand jury.

The jury, the second to begin investigations in Nassau at District Attorney Cahn's request, began questioning witnesses for the first time yesterday. All of those appearing before the jury were members of the Paul Sciacca (formerly Joseph (Joe Bananas) Bonanno) crime family, indicating, sources said, that Cahn has opened a major investigation of the trouble-prone crime family and the disappearance of two of its Long Island leaders.

Yesterday's developments here came simultaneously with the opening of Salvatore (Bill) Bonanno's trial in New York on federal charges of using a stolen credit card to charge thousands of dollars worth of goods and services. The younger Bonanno is the son of Joseph Bonanno. Both Bonannos have been living in the West after being exiled from their former base of power in New York and Long Island.

The Nassau jury's catch of the day appeared to be Vincent Morsellino, 71, of 4 Locustwood Place, Elmont. Federal sources described Morsellino as a "super capo" (ranking captain) of the crime family. Cahn refused to discuss Morsellino except to say that his rackets squad, directed by Norman Levy, and the Nassau Police Organized Crime Unit had uncovered his Long Island residency in a previous mob investigation.

Federal sources said that Morsellino was a cousin of Settimo Accardi, a Gerardo Catena crime family captain, and a cousin of Michael (Mike Adams) Adamo of Massapequa who along with rebel crime boss Frank (Frankie T) Mari of Searingtown disappeared last Sept. 18. Police believe that both men were murdered because Mari defied the Cosa Nostra Commission and seized control of the family from the ailing Sciacca, the commission's choice to rule the family. The sources said that Morsellino had been listed by federal officials as a major narcotics distributor at the time Joe Bonanno ruled the family.

Nassau investigators are particularly interested in Morsellino's activities because of the power he appears to wield. It was learned that among those crime executives who seek his advice or orders are: Natale Evola of Brooklyn, a powerful captain and attendee of the Apalachin crime convention; Salvatore Ferrugia of Bellrose, a captain; Michael Casale, a captain of Massapequa; jailed former Bonanno underboss Carmine Galente, and Adamo. All but Adamo and Galente were seen at the jury room yesterday.

The jury is apparently centering at least part of its investigation on the Bonanno-Sciacca war that resulted in five deaths, and on the Mari-Adamo suspected murders. Also seen at the jury room were: Michael Sabella, captain, Long Beach; John Petrone, soldier, Rockville Centre; Philip Rastelli, captain, Corona; Sereno Tartamella, captain, East Northport; Nicholas DeStefano, captain, Babylon; and John (Sally Burns) Morale, former captain of Middle Neck.

The jury was formed last month at Cahn's request to investigate the Bonanno-Sciacca war and the Joseph Colombo crime family. Another jury has been investigating the criminal activities of the Thomas Luchese crime family. In Suffolk, a crime jury was formed last June but has yet to begin questioning any major crime figures.

Selection of the federal court jury to hear charges against the younger Bonanno was still incomplete yesterday when Judge Walter R. Mansfield recessed the trial for the weekend.

Mansfield apparently was unaware at the outset of the proceedings who the 37-year-old defendant was. When the questioning of prospective jurors dealt with Bonanno's background, Mansfield asked: "Oh, is this the Bonanno who disappeared for a long period of time. "No, that's his father," the judge was informed.

The father dropped from sight in 1964 just hours before he was due to appear before a federal grand jury investigating organized crime. He now is free in $150,000 bond, awaiting trial on charges of obstructing justice.

The son is charged with conspiracy, perjury and 50 counts of mail fraud and his conviction on all could mean a theoretical sentence of 220 years in prison.

National Mafia Moves to Curb Strife in Bonanno 'Family' Here

By CHARLES GRUTZNER

Internal strife, murders, disappearances, weak hearts and law enforcement have caused such havoc and confusion in the organized crime "family" formerly ruled by Joseph (Joe Bananas) Bonanno that the Mafia's national commission is reported to have appointed three temporary administrators.

The triumvirate is said by law enforcement sources to consist of Philip (Rusty) Rastelli, a 51-year-old former convict; Natale (Joe Diamond) Evola, 63 a convicted narcotics trafficker and muscleman who is a partner in several trucking and garment companies, and Joseph DiFilippi, a Brooklyn dress manufacturer about whom little is known except that he is listed by the Justice Department as a capodecina (captain) under Paul Sciacca, nominal boss of the former Bonanno family.

Sciacca, who has a chronic heart ailment, is said to have lost all desire to continue as boss after the disappearance and presumed murder of Frank Mari, whom he was grooming to become his successor.

Michael Adamo, another Sciacca captain, and Mari—whose niece married Sciacca's son 17 months ago—vanished from their Nassau County homes last Sept. 16 and were reported missing by their wives several days later.

No Trace Found

The police and F.B.I. agents, who have found no trace, believe they were murdered along with James (Legs) Episcopia, Mari's bodyguard, whose disappearance from his Manhattan haunts about the same time, did not come to the authorities' attention until later.

At the time Mari and Adamo vanished, investigators were puzzled whether this signaled a resumption of the "Banana War"—in which at least six Mafiosi were shot dead and several others were wounded after the forced abdication of Bonanno in 1964—or whether it betokened a new feud among Sciacca's henchmen.

Federal and local law enforcement sources say now that subsequent developments and underworld informants indicate that Mari, Adamo and Episcopia were slain because some of Sciacca's older captains and "soldiers" resented the way Mari was being pushed ahead of Rastelli, who had long held the honored position of family consigliere (counselor).

Two More Listed

Two reputed members of the Sciacca family are Nicholas Marangello, an old-time capodecina under Joseph Bonanno who, according to the Justice Department, retains that rank under Sciacca, and Matteo Valvo, listed as a former Bonanno captain who is now in the lower rank of soldier under Sciacca.

Marangello's address appears on the records of the Joint Legislative Committee on Crime as 2515 Tratman Avenue, the Bronx, and Valvo's as 168 Bay 41st Street, Brooklyn.

Several other members of the Sciacca group and of other Mafia families had been questioned previously by the legislative committee and by Brooklyn and Nassau grand juries. Most refused to testify on the ground of possible self-incrimination. Several were jailed for contempt in refusing to answer grand jury questions after being offered immunity and more than a dozen others are under contempt proceedings.

Rastelli, now in the Nassau County jail, will be served with a Brooklyn contempt citation when he completes his 30-day term next week.

The kidnaping of Bonanno in 1964 led to the Banana War. Bonanno, who was said to have plotted against the bosses of other Mafia families, was marked for execution, but successfully bargained for his life by giving up his control of his rich underworld empire.

He did not emerge from hiding for 19 months, but his son Salvatore (Bill) rallied the Bonanno loyalists in an attempt to regain control of the rackets from Gaspare DiGregorio, whom the national commission had chosen in 1965 as new boss of the family. DiGregorio had been best man at Joseph Bonanno's wedding and was Salvatore Bonanno's godfather.

The Bonanno and DiGregorio forces had a shoot-out early in 1966 on Troutman Street in Brooklyn in which more than 20 shots were fired without any casualties. But the war became deadly over the next few years as members of both factions were ambushed. Frank Mari, who had deserted Bonanno for DiGregorio, was shot on a Brooklyn street in July, 1966, but survived.

DiGregorio, who suffered from a heart ailment, was not an effective war chieftain and willingly surrendered his leadership to Sciacca.

Three of Sciacca's men were killed by submachine-gun fire in the Cypress Gardens restaurant in Ridgewood, Queens, in November, 1967. Four months later Salvatore Bonanno's bodyguard-chauffeur, Sam Barrone, was shot dead in Brooklyn. Five days before Barrone's murder, Mari and Episcopia had been arrested while riding about with guns in their car.

Several murders later, most of the remaining Bonanno loyalists realized theirs was a lost cause and made peace with Sciacca.

Hard Times

Joseph and Salvatore Bonanno had given up their fight in the East. The father became a near-recluse in Tucson, Ariz., and Salvatore moved his family from East Meadow, L. I., to California. Although they are said to retain widespread financial holdings, bad times have overtaken them.

The elder Bonanno is currently on trial in Federal Court in Tucson, charged with conspiracy to bribe a witness to recant testimony that sent an Arizona Mafioso to prison.

Salvatore Bonanno was found guilty by a jury in Federal Court here of conspiracy, mail fraud and perjury arising from his use of a Diners Club credit card not his own on a cross-country trip. His sentencing, set for this week, has been postponed because his lawyer is engaged in the Tucson trial.

Sciacca's heart ailment enabled him to avoid questioning by official bodies, among them the Joint Legislative Committee on Crime and grand juries in Brooklyn and Nassau. But he recently was found guilty of contempt and sentenced to 30 days for failure to answer questions of a Brooklyn grand jury after being offered immunity. He is free on bail pending his appeal, which will come before the Appellate Division on Monday.

Rastelli, who is 52 years old, has a police record that began when he was picked up as a delinquent at the age of 7. He was arrested in 1936 in Brooklyn on a homicide charge, which was reduced to assault and got him a reformatory term.

He drew a sentence of five to 10 years in 1940 for assault and robbery and has been arrested several times on other charges, most of which were dismissed. His home address is listed as 97-20 57th Avenue, Corona, Queens.

Evola, who lives at 972 Bay Ridge Parkway, Brooklyn, invoked the Fifth Amendment in refusing to answer questions at hearings of the Joint Legislative Committee on Crime.

Law enforcement sources identify DiFilippi as the owner of the Barrett Dress Company of 7602 13th Avenue, Brooklyn.

Death Ends Era In Crime Family

Smithtown—Retired crime boss Gaspar (Little Caesar) DiGregorio, the man who succeeded crime czar Joseph (Joe Bananas) Bonanno and touched off a bloody gang war, died of lung cancer here yesterday in St. John's Hospital.

The 65-year-old crime leader's death ended a turbulent chapter in the history of the 40-year-old Bonanno crime family. An unknown to law enforcement officers until Bonanno disappeared in a mob-arranged kidnaping. DiGregorio was selected by Buffalo crime boss Stefano Magaddino as Bonanno's successor.

DiGregorio had entered the hospital last week. He had been ill for more than a year of what had then been diagnosed as a heart ailment, an illness that enabled him to avoid appearances before federal and local grand juries investigating business infiltration and the Bonanno family gang war.

DiGregorio first came into public prominance as a Cosa Nostra figure in 1964 when the Suffolk Police Intelligence Squad uncovered his operation in Babylon and began a surveillance of his activities. The unit was joined by the FBI, and New York City, state and Nassau County police in a six-month watch that led to major mob meetings and the identification of more than 150 top hoods. The major meetings were held by Cosa Nostra commission (ruling crime body) representatives to select DiGregorio as a leader, and they were first reported in Newsday articles.

Gaspar DiGregorio

DiGregorio and Bonanno's son, Salvatore, were at odds almost immediately because DiGregorio had reduced the son's status from adviser to lowly soldier. The younger Bonanno rebelled and DiGregorio ordered a "hit contract" (murder) that failed Jan. 28, 1966, in Brooklyn. The attempted murder led to a gang war that has claimed nine lives and to grand jury investigations.

The heat was too much for DiGregorio, who retired in 1967 when Bonanno returned from mob exile. In DiGregorio's place, the mob named Paul Sciacca of Massapequa, who crushed the Bonanno rebellion.

DiGregorio lived in retirement at the home of his son-in-law, Louis Coluccio of 16 Crawford St., Smithtown.

Born in Tripani, Italy, the hometown of Magaddino, DiGregorio entered the U.S. from Canada in 1921. He is survived by his brother, Salvatore; his wife, Vita; his sons, Leonard and Anthony, and a daughter, Catherine. A wake for DiGregorio was held at the James Funeral Home, Massapequa. Burial will be at St. Charles Cemetery in Lindenhurst Monday after a funeral mass at 10 AM at Sts. Phillip and James Catholic Church in St. James. —Renner

REPUTED LEADER IN MAFIA IS DEAD

DiGregorio, Called Ex-Head of 'Family,' Dies on L.I.

By CHARLES GAUTZNER

Gaspare DiGregorio, a small garment manufacturer who was catapulted to national notoriety in 1965 as the reputed successor to Joseph (Joe Bananas) Bonanno as boss of a far-flung Mafia empire, has died in the obscurity to which he retired four years ago.

Mr. DiGregorio, 65 years old, succumbed to lung cancer on Thursday in St. John's Hospital in Smithtown, L. I. At the James Funeral Home in Massapequa, L. I., where a wake is being held for the alleged Mafioso, a spokesman refused to give information about funeral arrangements, saying: "The family don't want anything in the newspapers."

It was learned from law enforcement sources that burial will be on Monday in St. Charles Cemetery in Farmingdale after a 10 A.M. funeral mass at Sts. Philip and James Roman Catholic Church in St. James.

The mild-mannered, bespectacled man of medium build, who was never convicted, was described by law enforcement agents as a "sleeper" in organized crime when the Federal Bureau of Investigation listed him as the new boss of the Bonanno "family" some months after Bonanno had been kidnapped on orders of the Mafia's national commission and forced to abdicate.

Close to Magaddino

Mr. DiGregorio, who had been best man at Joseph Bonanno's wedding and godfather to his eldest son, Salvatore (Bill) Bonanno, was reputedly given the leadership through the influence of his brother-in-law, Stefano Magaddino, boss of the Mafia in western New York and the Ohio Valley.

But Mr. DiGregorio was said to have had little heart for the leadership after the attempt by a group of Bonanno loyalists, led by Salvatore Bonanno, to regain Joseph Bonanno's lost empire led to a shootout in a Brooklyn street in which more than 20 shots were exchanged without casualties. Mr. DiGregorio, who had two heart attacks during his brief reign as boss, reportedly stepped down within a year in favor of Paul Sciacca.

The "Banana War" became murderous in 1967 when three Sciacca adherents were shot dead by machine-gun fire in the Cypress Gardens Restaurant in Ridgewood, Queens. Since then the casualties on both sides have included at least seven known dead, three missing and presumed murdered, and several injured.

Mr. DiGregorio was under subpoena of grand juries in Brooklyn and Nassau County to testify in their investigations of the "Banana War" and of the loan-sharking, gambling, labor extortion and other rackets and business interests extending across the nation and into Canada.

Before each of Mr. DiGregorio's scheduled grand-jury appearances in recent years, physicians found that his heart ailment made it impossible for him to testify without risking another heart attack.

Born in Tripani, Italy, he entered this country from Canada in 1921. At the time of his reported elevation to the leadership of the former Bonanno family, he lived in West Babylon, L. I., and owned a garment factory in Brooklyn. More recently, he lived with his son-in-law and daughter, Louis and Catherine Coluccio, at 16 Crawford Street, Smithtown.

He is survived also by his widow, Vita, whom he married after the death of his first wife, Magaddino's sister; by a brother, Salvatore, and two sons Leonard and Anthony.

Law enforcement officials who have been following the twisting fortunes of the "Banana War" and other developments within the Mafia said yesterday they did not expect any organizational developments as a result of Mr. DiGregorio's death.

"It's been so long since he faded from the scene," said one agent, who asked to remain anonymous, "that his going didn't create any vacuum for anyone to fill or fight over."
